National News

Therapy for under 5s reduces wider mental health problems in families: Research by the Anna Freud Centre shows that mental health problems in families can be reduced by offering therapeutic interventions to babies and pre-school age children as well as their parents or care givers. The report's findings highlight the need for greater investment in early age therapy.

Care Leavers want access to financial education: Research by financial education charity, MyBnk finds that 80 per cent of young care leavers want more help managing their finances, while 89 per cent have encountered challenges when trying to access financial education. Care leavers face financial independence from age 18, compared with the current UK average of age 24 for leaving the family home. This report comes during the cost-of-living crisis which campaigners warn is likely to disproportionately impact young care leavers.

Improving family support services for minority ethnic families: Report by the Early Intervention Foundation in partnership with the Race Equality Foundation and Action for Children explores the experiences of minority ethnic families in accessing and receiving family support, to better understand the challenges and opportunities in how family support services work for minority ethnic families and young people.
