

Visit to Wightwick Manor 2 August 2024

Kings Bromley Historians enjoyed a visit to Wightwick Manor, owned by The National Trust, on 2nd August. The group had received an invitation from Lily Purslow, a member of staff at the Manor, who was undertaking research into stained glass windows in Staffordshire churches produced by the William Morris workshop. Allan Howard had been able to provide her with further information on the windows in All Saints' Church in the village. Members were able to look at the original coloured drawings of the different stained glass designs for the churches.

